Dear colleagues,

Today we are discussing a new project, and I believe that some of our team's ideas fall short of our competitors' standards. I think some of our employees are simply lazy and don't understand the importance of the task. If we don't fix this, customers will have to wait longer, and this could damage our reputation.

I would also like to point out that one of our competitors recently used unfair marketing methods, and we need to be careful not to repeat their mistakes.

I hope everyone will take this criticism constructively and consider the recommendations.
